

Snow leaperds

By Megan Carolina Surbaugh

Why do people kill them?

People kill snow leopards because of their fur. A lot of designers will do this for clothing and for money. Their fur is the main reason people want to kill these lovely animals. Snow leopards are known not to be aggressive to humans.

What do they look like?

These animals are white fur with black spots on them. The fur on their stomach is just white and not spotted. They have a gray face with black dots. Their fur keeps them from getting too cold. One thing that you can spot them with is their long tail.

Where do they live?

Snow leopards are found in cold mountain tops. Snow leopards have evolved to live in some of the harshest conditions on earth. Their light-gray coats spotted with large black rosettes blends in perfectly with the steep and rocky cold mountains.

Facts

- For about 18 months, females raise their cubs-all alone
- The snow leopard primarily lives in arid, barren mountain areas
- Snow leopards are not known to be aggressive towards humans in fact they are just trying to protect their cubs
- There is a small population of snow leopards on earth

